tentative budget

By ANNLEIGH McMANIS

Herald Correspondent

HIGHLAND — Highland city established a tentative budget of $508,- 950 for the 1991-92 fiscal year.

According to Utah law each municipality must adopt a tentative budget by the first regular meeting in May. Mayor James Hewlett told the council members that the budget can be changed, amended or altered before the final budget.

The council will hold a work session on May 22 at 6 p.m. to further discuss the budget. Later in the evening a public hearing will be held in conjunction with the council's regularly scheduled meeting.
Utah law requires that a public hearing be held before a final budget can be adopted.

No money has yet to be budgeted for library needs of the citizens in Highland, nor have any decisions been made as to what will happen with American Fork.

The council has budgeted $20,000 to buy a snow removal truck and equipment during the 1991-92 budget year. The cost for the truck could be paid over a period of time and the cost of an employee to run and maintain it would be shared with the water company.

Also, $3,500 has been set aside for recreation and the council was told of plans for developing a program in conjunction with Alpine.

The council also tentatively budgeted $12,000 for a new computer system and laser printer for the city offices. The printer could be used to save typesetting costs on the city newsletter. A new system would enable the office staff to accomplish billing tasks and run word processing programs simultaneously.

At the last meeting the council agreed to use the remaining funds from the city building project to install a sprinkler system and also purchase a flag pole for the front grounds.

They also agreed to budget $3,000 for phase one in the development of the grounds around the city building.

Boundaries between Orem and Provo will have a slight adjustment after the cities iron out details.

The boundary adjustments recommended by the city's development services department were outlined for the council Tuesday night.
